Stories from the Southern Islands

Book Two - A mystery by the sea

Island of Whispers

by Asha Menon | Illustrated by Leo Ng

A mystery begins when the tide goes out.

Join twins Nia and Ravi as they follow an old map, explore a sea cave and uncover a forgotten story about their island home.

For readers aged 9 to 12

Book Review

Island of Whispers follows twins Nia and Ravi during their school holiday on a small island. When they discover a faded map inside their grandfather's toolbox, they begin searching for a cave that appears only at low tide.

The twelve short chapters move quickly and contain vivid descriptions of the coast, village and mangrove forest. The mystery is exciting without being frightening, so younger readers can enjoy it too.

A glossary explains unfamiliar sea terms, while the illustrations help readers picture the clues. Most importantly, the story shows how the twins succeed by listening to local residents and working together.

Section I: Comprehension Open-ended(20 marks)

Read the passage and answer questions 66 to 75.

Mr Das owned a small outdoor shop, but he worried that his son, Arjun, often depended on others to solve simple problems. Hoping that Arjun would become more responsible, he sent him to Ms Noor, an experienced forest ranger, to learn the secret of good judgement.

5 Determined to prove himself, Arjun set off without delay. He crossed a wooden bridge and followed a narrow path until he reached the ranger station. Ms Noor welcomed him and listened carefully as he explained why his father had sent him.

Ms Noor handed Arjun an old compass and asked him to walk to a lookout point, note the landmarks and return before noon. Arjun stared at the needle and hurried along the trail. He ignored the river bend, the red bridge and the tall tree beside the path.

10 After some time, the needle began to shake. Arjun turned in several directions and became completely confused. He eventually found his way back by following the sound of running water. Embarrassed, he admitted that he had trusted the compass without checking his surroundings.

Ms Noor examined the compass and asked Arjun to repeat the walk. This time, she told him to slow down and observe carefully. Arjun noticed the position of the sun, the shape of the hill and the marks painted on the trees.

Near the red bridge, he met two younger children who had wandered away from their family. Arjun calmly showed them the route to the station before continuing to the lookout point. He returned safely and described every landmark he had seen.

15 Ms Noor then revealed that the compass had been broken all along. She had wanted Arjun to understand that a tool could guide him, but it could not think for him. Good judgement came from observing, questioning and adapting when something went wrong.

Arjun finally understood his father's purpose. He thanked Ms Noor and went home eager to help in the shop. From that day on, he checked facts for himself and accepted responsibility for his decisions.

66 Why did Mr Das send Arjun to Ms Noor?
