Skyward Adventures

Book One - Courage above the rooftops

The Last Kite

by Nur Aisyah | Illustrated by Marcus Yong

One final flight. One promise to keep.

When a precious handmade kite disappears before the village festival, Hana follows a trail of ribbon through lanes, rooftops and a sudden storm.

Bonus guide: Make a simple paper kite

Book Review

The Last Kite is a warm adventure about Hana, a girl who has promised her grandfather that their kite will fly at the village festival. When it is carried away by a strong wind, she refuses to give up.

The story is easy to follow, yet the author creates suspense through changing weather and a series of small clues. Black-and-white illustrations show how the kite is constructed and make the action scenes clearer.

The final chapter is especially satisfying because Hana succeeds not through luck, but by asking friends for help and using what her grandfather taught her. The craft guide at the end is a useful extra.

Section D: Visual Text Comprehension - Questions(5 marks)

For each question, choose the best answer and write its number in the brackets.

- 21 What is Hana trying to do in the story?
 (1) Win a running race (2) Find a missing kite
 (3) Build a new house (4) Avoid the village festival ()
- 22 How do the illustrations help readers?
 (1) They explain the author's childhood. (2) They show the kite's construction and action scenes.
 (3) They replace the final chapter. (4) They advertise the next book. ()
- 23 The word 'suspense' suggests that readers may feel _____.
 (1) curious about what will happen (2) certain of the ending
 (3) bored by the clues (4) confused by every character ()
- 24 Why is the ending described as satisfying?
 (1) Hana finds the kite by chance. (2) The festival is cancelled.
 (3) Hana applies what she learnt and accepts help. (4) The story ends before the storm. ()
- 25 Which feature provides readers with an activity after the story?
 (1) The subtitle (2) The craft guide

Section I: Comprehension Open-ended(20 marks)

Read the passage and answer questions 66 to 75.

Mr Rahman was troubled because his son, Ben, often borrowed things without asking and forgot to return them. Hoping to teach him about trust, he sent Ben to Mrs Koh, a retired librarian, to discover what made a person dependable.

Ben wanted to finish the lesson quickly, so he hurried to the old neighbourhood library. Mrs Koh listened to his explanation and handed him a small brass key. She asked him to help organise the reading room before the afternoon visitors arrived.

- 5 Ben immediately tried the key in every lock he could find. He opened a cabinet, moved several labelled boxes and searched through a drawer of old letters. While rushing, he knocked a pile of books onto the floor and mixed up the carefully sorted papers.

Mrs Koh returned and looked silently at the disorder. Ben felt ashamed and admitted what he had done. She explained that the key gave him access to some places, but it did not give him permission to examine everything.

- 10 She asked Ben to tidy the room again. This time, he read the labels, returned each item to its proper place and asked before opening anything. He also noticed a younger child searching anxiously for a missing library book.

Ben found the book under a chair and handed it back. Near the entrance, he saw a locked donation box marked 'For Book Repairs'. Although the brass key fitted the lock, Ben left the box untouched and told Mrs Koh what he had found.

- 15 Mrs Koh smiled and revealed that the donation box had been the real test. A dependable person, she said, protected what belonged to others even when no one was watching. 'A key gives access, not permission,' she reminded him.

Ben understood why his father had sent him. He returned home and placed every borrowed item on the table. From then on, he asked before taking things and made sure that each object was returned promptly.

66 Why did Mr Rahman send Ben to Mrs Koh?
